Clint represents borrowers, lenders and various other financial institutions in the structuring and the documentation of various commercial financing transactions. He provides fast and highly responsive service that allows him to respond swiftly to the needs of his clients.

For the past 22 years, Clint has counseled and assisted his clients with their domestic and cross-border loan transactions, with a primary focus on the middle-market businesses sector. His practice includes all types of financings, from asset-based lending, secured and unsecured credit facilities to equipment leasing and purchase money security arrangements. Often Clint's work involves a real estate component, and he has helped lenders with all facets of these real estate finance transactions both in the Midwest and across the country. Clint and his team offer flexibility, rapid response time and the ability to accurately and efficiently draft, document and close transactions in a practical manner while ensuring the needs of his clients are timely met and satisfied.

Clint also draws on his background in financial restructuring law to counsel lenders on workout and forbearance issues related to borrowers facing defaults or bankruptcy issues.

As a Certified Public Accountant and from his former positions with Arthur Andersen LLP (both as an auditor and as a financial consultant), Clint has an understanding of a business' underlying financial statements, which allows him to work seamlessly with finance and business professionals to achieve their financing goals.
