Jeff helps all types of businesses navigate complex litigation, arbitration, class action, regulatory, and transactional matters in venues across the country.

Drawing on his 26 years of experience, he drills down on complex problems, pinpoints the core factual and legal issues at stake, and develops strategies for resolving disputes and facilitating business deals in an expeditious and cost-effective manner. Jeff works closely with a client's employees and executives to help them prepare for their role in a case and put them at ease during the litigation, arbitration, and negotiation process.

Jeff represents health care systems and providers seeking to recover amounts owed by payors and defending class actions concerning billing practices. He also advises higher education institutions in lawsuits and arbitrations brought by former students, state attorneys general, and government regulatory agencies in multiple jurisdictions; in program reviews and audits by the U.S. Department of Education; in accreditation disputes; and in issues with federal and state regulators. In the financial services arena, Jeff has represented banks, automotive finance companies, and lease finance companies facing lender liability and discrimination claims. He also counsels public pension systems on various litigation and benefits issues.
