Rose assists clients with a wide variety of business litigation matters.

She performs legal research, drafts pleadings and dispositive motions, supports discovery efforts, and communicates with clients. Rose helps litigation teams analyze the strengths and weaknesses of arguments and evidence. As a commercial litigator, Rose defends companies from a wide variety of allegations, including breach of contract, consumer fraud, product defects, False Claims Act violations, and more.

Rose also has experience representing individuals facing government investigations or criminal charges.

As a third-year law student, Rose successfully briefed and argued an appeal in front of the Missouri Court of Appeals. Before attending law school, Rose worked for a decade as an educator in primary and secondary schools, including as a Teach For America Corps Member and Volunteer. She also worked part-time for a local family-owned roofing company from 2001-2016. Rose also provides pro bono assistance to litigants in landlord tenant cases.
