Thompson Coburn's New York office was established in 2021 through its combination with Hahn & Hessen, a premier boutique firm with nearly a century of experience in commercial finance, bankruptcy, workouts, and complex litigation.

Our New York attorneys deliver a comprehensive range of integrated legal services to major money center banks, supporting every stage of the lending process. From documenting loans and commercial finance transactions to leading workouts and restructurings for troubled loans, we represent lenders in bankruptcies and advise on all related commercial litigation and disputes.

Our office also boasts thriving corporate finance and litigation practices, representing business entities and major money center banks in matters such as mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, joint ventures, trust and fiduciary litigation, and complex commercial disputes.

Nationally, Thompson Coburn is renowned for its bankruptcy practice, where we represent official creditors' and equity committees, trustees, secured lenders, debtors, and parties seeking to purchase distressed assets, including claims and debt instruments.

Additionally, our seasoned trusts and estates practitioners offer a full spectrum of services to corporate and individual clients, their families, and financial institutions – from preparing simple wills and forming family trusts to implementing complex estate plans. Our team also provides ERISA advice and counsel in connection with complex financing transactions, mergers and acquisitions.

Our New York real estate group represents a diverse array of clients in all types of real estate transactions, including mortgage financings, construction loans, commercial leases, acquisitions and dispositions of real estate assets, and various other real estate-related matters.
