I work with clients to navigate complex railroad and asbestos-related legal challenges and achieve favorable outcomes.

overview

Meghan Trentz is part of the tort and railroad litigation teams. Her work focuses on matters involving toxic torts, asbestos, the railroad industry, and claims under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, among other disputes.

Before joining Thompson Coburn, Meghan interned at the St. Louis County Public Defender's Office, where she gained experience representing clients in preliminary and bond reduction hearings and arguing suppression motions.

in my free time

I enjoy training CrossFit, coaching college mock trial, and diving into fiction. As a certified Level 1 CrossFit trainer, I coach individuals and participate in competitions whenever I can. Some of my favorite books are "American War" by Omar El Akkad and the "Thursday Murder Club" series by Richard Osman.
